THE LIBRETTO of an entertainment (cantata by Baldassare Galuppi) performed in the Teatro della Pergola on 15 November 1765 before the new Grand Duke Pietro Leopoldo and his consort Maria Luisa. Teresa Torti of Milan took the role of 'Venere', Giacomo Veroli of Arezzo 'Enea', and Antonio Prati of Bologna 'Latino'. A second performance was given on 23 November; except for these two performances, the Pergola remained closed in mourning for the death of the Emperor Francesco I, until 30 May 1766.

Members of the Istituto de' Nobili performed in the balli (scenes five and seven) and giuochi di picca e bandiera, the latter executed on foot and on horseback. Giovanni Batista Sereni and Costantino Mainero designed the costumes and Giuseppe Romei,

Domenico Stagi, Pietro delle Nave, Giuseppe del Moro, Vincenzo Meucci, and Michele Loi painted the twelve scenes.²

Two days previously, the Istituto de' Nobili had invited Pietro Leopoldo to view an exhibition of paintings, drawings, and maps borrowed from members' collections. The list of these art works (printed pp.11–14) includes a drawing of the façade of the Cappella di S. Lorenzo attributed to Michelangelo (lent by marchese Girolamo Bartolommei).
