In museum mounts and preserved in a box.

THESE VERY RARE PRINTS illustrate scenes in the pantomime 'Der Schwätzer der Leichtgläubige', an entertainment performed in the small auditorium (Aula minor) of Salzburg University, on 27 February 1764. The pantomime was enacted during an intermission of the tragedy 'Pietas in patriam' and is dedicated by its author, Florian Reichssiegel, to Prince-Archbishop Siegmund Christoph von Schrattenbach. The principal characters are the clowns Harlequin, Hanswurst, and Pierrot; a synopsis of the action (in Latin and German) appears beneath each print.

The scenes were drawn by the Salzburg stage designer Matthias Siller (1710–1790) for the Augsburg printmakers Philip Andreas Degmair (1711–1783) and Johann Philip Haid (1730–1806), the latter producing mezzotints. Most prints bear the legend ‘Prospects théâtrales pour servir aux caméras obscures et autres machines optiques’, for which reason Artur Kutcher believed they do not record actual scenery, but ‘Lichtbilddekorationen’, images projected with the help of a camera obscura onto a curtain. His supposition is not endorsed by other authorities.<sup>1</sup>

Florian Reichssiegel (1735–1793) entered the Benedictine abbey of St. Peter in Salzburg in 1754, became secretary to Abbot Beda in 1759, and in 1766 was appointed professor of poetry of its university and later ‘comicus’.<sup>2</sup> Reichssiegel also wrote the pantomime ‘Der Traum’ (carnival 1767–1768) and the ‘interludium’ ‘Die Hochzeit auf der Alm’, both set to music by Johann Michael Haydn,<sup>3</sup> as well as ‘Finalkönodien’, plays written to celebrate the close of the school year at Salzburg University.

The majority of our impressions are in fine uncoloured state (only plate 12 is hand-coloured). Boberski reproduces a coloured set of the prints in the Salzburger Museum Carolino Augusteum, Graphiksammlung (Inventar-Nummern 1819/49, 1820/49, 5490/49–5499/49) and cites a single uncoloured impression (2047/49).<sup>4</sup> A complete set of coloured impressions in the Civica Raccolta delle Stampe Achille Bertarelli in Milan (Albo G 63),<sup>5</sup> and another is in the Theatermuseum in Munich.<sup>6</sup> An incomplete set of coloured impressions (lacking print no. 3) is in the Getty Research Institute;<sup>7</sup> other incomplete sets
